Craggy Island & Ceol Anam Cara play under their new combined name - Seacht (that's Irish for "Seven" - pronounced "Shocked"). Craggy Island Band is a little bit of folk, a little bit of blues and a lot of Irish. They play traditional Irish music, but sometimes like to "Craggy" it up a bit. Craggy Island is made up of Paddy on guitar and bodran, Gail on guitar, bouzouki and mandolin, and Susan, who likes to fiddle around. The fourth member of the trio is a green lava lamp named Seamus (green for Ireland, lava lamp for the 60's. Céol Anam Cara features four multi-instrumentalists with a passion for traditional folk music of Ireland and the British Isles. Performing mainly dance music, Céol Anam Cara is known for their playing of jaunty jigs, pulsating polkas, rousing reels and an occasional sweet air. Songs ranging from Traditional Irish sean nos, English folk revival fare and American folk mixed up with the odd original piece all help to round out the mix. Get the jump on St. Patrick's Day! Saturday March 24 – "Dry Mill Road at Barns of Rose Hill" 7:30 PM. Drymill Road is an Americana bluegrass band playing high energy and heartfelt original material featuring the songwriting of Sean Loomis. The band also offers its own renditions of popular covers. Drymill Road was formed by band leader Sean Loomis in 2008. Originally a trio, the band included current members, Sean Loomis on Vocals and Guitar and Dave Hurt on Bass, both of whom are masters of their instruments and, graduates of the Shenandoah University Music program. In October 2009 the band recruited Doug Ross on mandolin and Robert Mabe on Banjo. Both of whom are heavily influenced by traditional music. As a four piece band, Drymill Road has a rich full sound, using each instrument as a voice, the band takes you on a wild harmonic journey.
